Dear Col. Fry:

Your inquiry dated 28 January 1971 and correspondence from Mr. Melden E. A copy of that agreement is attached for your convenience.

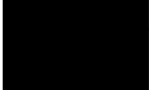

This office has coordinated with interested individuals in this Agency and finds we have no continuing interest in the subject records. The request posed by Mr. Smith appears to be within the purview of your Agency and is returned for your consideration and disposition.

Dear Colonel Fry:

I was happy to receive your reply to my inquiry of 3 November just before Christmas, because I had become convinced that this inquiry had somehow become lost in the maze down there.

Should we dismiss my request to see certain USSBS documents simply because they originated with the Air Ministry? Or could you people get in touch with the British and pass on my request for a selective declassification action? After all these records pertain to an event over twenty-five years ago, and if you were to contact the proper British clearing authority they just might reply favorably.

Would you please pursue this matter further and reply reasonably soon?

The documents in question, again, are:

Under Section 4 (European Target Intelligence) and further broken down to 3a beginning on page 223, (Damage Assessment photo intelligence reports of European targets filed alphabetically, etc.)
#746 (on page 229) Dresden, Germany (three envelopes).

In the meantime I shall write to Mr. L. A. Jackets, Air Historical Branch, London, and inform him of my desires in this matter.

Sincerely,

Melden E. Smith, Jr.

Dear Mr. Smith:

Reference is made to your follow-up letter of 2 January 1971, on the subject of U.S. Strategic Bombing Survey Records.

We have again reviewed the records in question at the National Archives. A page-by-page examination revealed that as previously stated, a large number of these records are proprietary to Her Majesty's Government. Additionally, however, we found that intermingled with those records in the bound documents concerned are documents which are proprietary to another foreign government and two U.S. Federal Agencies.

We regret our inability to furnish you with a final position on your request at this time. As you can appreciate, the Defense Intelligence Agency has no cognizance over the USSBS Records and no authority to either act on or recommend their release. Although we have been informed that previous requests for access to these records have not been favorably considered, we are referring your request through appropriate channels to obtain decisions thereon from the Agencies concerned. We will keep you informed of any progress in this matter.

Sincerely,

Colonel Bert Ezell
Assistant Chief of Staff for Administration
Defense Intelligence Agency
Washington, D. C.

Dear Colonel Ezell:

I am currently working on a doctoral manuscript in history on a reconsideration of the bombing of Dresden, Germany during World War II.

I would like to have the following portion of the USSBS Study declassified so that Mr. John Taylor of the Modern Military Records Division could have it microfilmed and forwarded to me. The selection is;

Under Section 4 (European Target Intelligence) and further broken down to 3a beginning on page 223, (Damage Assessment photo intelligence reports of European targets filed alphabetically, etc.) #746 (on page 229) Dresden, Germany (3 envelopes).

Mr. Taylor advised me to contact you with this request. I have a research clearance from the Office of Air Force History for my undertaking and one also from the State Department.

Sincerely yours,

Melden E. Smith, Jr.

Dear Mr. Smith:

Reference is made to your letter, 3 November 1970, addressed to Colonel Bert Ezell (now retired), requesting access to certain United States Strategic Bombing Survey (USSBS) records.

Upon review it has been determined that these particular documents were originated and security classified by the British Government. Declassification of classified information furnished to the United States by a foreign government lies solely with that foreign government, therefore, authorization for access to the documents requested cannot be granted.

We are sorry we have not been able to accommodate your request.

Sincerely,
